The Good Samaritan, Luke 10:25-37

When we speak of the Parable of the Good Samaritan we oftentimes apply it to our lives by saying it means we should stop on the road and help people who are broken down in their car or that we should spend time with people who feel left out.

But what if we put a spiritual application to the parable? What if looked at the robbers as temptations or those who lead us into sin and then abandon us? What if we looked at the Levite and Priest as "religious" people who don't take the opportunity to teach and to help the lost person they see each day?

What if we see the inn as the church, where a sinner is taken to be spiritually healed and to be brought back to health?

If we look at it this way, then where would you and I fit in to this parable? Do you pass by the lost and hurting without a care like the religious Pharisee? Or do you see your obligation as a good neighbor as this Samaritan? The culture of the day said the Samaritan shouldn't stop. The threat of robbery on the road said the Samaritan shouldn't stop. The conveniences and busyness of the day said the Samaritan shouldn't stop. But a loving heart and responsibility as a neighbor told the Samaritan to stop and fulfill his duty to God.

So in light of this parable here's the question...

Are you a Good Samaritan?
